Help index Indiana's World War I records

The Indiana State Archives has started a "virtual volunteer" program, where you can index their records from your own computer. Their first project is a collection of cards that summarize Indiana veterans' service in World War I.

These service record cards are all the more valuable to genealogy researchers because a fire in 1973 at the National Archives' personnel records center in St. Louis destroyed 95% of the Army's World War I records.

When complete, the index will be freely available on the FamilySearch website; the digital images will be restricted to viewing at Family History Centers and FamilySearch Affiliate Libraries.

Research has found that Mary Belle Watters was born 14 July 1882 in Genoa, DeKalb County, Illinois; died 1951 in Indiana. She was the daughter of George L. Watters (1847-1934) and Mary E. Yeley (1858-1892). Mary Belle Watters married Andrew Fyffe (born December 1881 in Knightsville, Clay County, Indiana; died 1 March 1945 in Terre Haute, Vigo County, Indiana) on 22 October 1905 in Vigo County, Indiana. They had a son, George Watters Fyffe (1910-1980), who married Mayme Jane Shaver in Vigo County in 1938.

Indiana adoption records 1941-1993 opened

Effective July 1st, children who were adopted in Indiana between 1941 and 1993 can request a copy of their own birth record from the Indiana State Department of Health. This is the result of a law passed in 2016, which gave biological parents until 2018 to restrict access to their information.

FOUND: Photo of Vigo County couple (1900's)

Research has found that Rhoda May Kuykendall (born 18 November 1871 in Dennison, Clark County, Illinois; died 11 September 1932 in Dennison, Clark County, Illinois) was the daughter of John Kuykendall (1844-1922) and Eliza Ellen Newell (1850 - ??). Legal terms explained: Bill of exceptions

In a civil case or criminal case, you may appeal the decision of the court. When filing an appeal, you must include a bill of exceptions - a written explanation of your objections to specific rulings that were made by the court during the case and the evidence that supports your objections. NOTE: Federal courts no longer require a bill of exceptions to be included in an appeal; however, some courts on the state level still do.

RESEARCH TIP: War of 1812 pension applications

WAR OF 1812.
ACT FEBRUARY 14, 1871

BRIEF OF CLAIM FOR A SURVIVOR'S PENSION

in the case of Thomas Dickey, a _____ of Captain Joel Comb's Company, Indiana Militia.
Residence: Harrison County Missouri
Post office address: Betheny, Harrison Co Mo.

Enlisted October 31, 1812, discharged December 7, 1812
Served afterward from _____, 18____, to _____, 18____ in Captain _____ Company, _____ Militia.

Declaration and identification in due form, filed May 22, 1871.

The War of 1812 - fought between 1812 and 1815 with Great Britain - was also known as the 2nd American Revolution, coming just 1 generation after the fight for American independence.

Almost 500,000 Americans participated - many of them in state militias that were formed for local defense. Indiana did not become a state until 1816, but residents of the Indiana Territory served in these militias.

After the war, a series of laws gave deeds to pieces of federal land (called "bounty land warrants") to War of 1812 veterans, to help settle the westernmost territories. And there were already laws in place from the end of the Revolutionary War to give a military pension to a veteran who had died or become disabled as the result of their service.

However, it wasn't until 1871 that Congress passed a law allowing veterans (or their widows and minor children) to apply for a pension for their service even if they hadn't died or become disabled. That 1871 law applied to veterans who had served at least 60 days - or their widows if their marriage had occurred before 1815. An 1878 law expanded eligibility to include veterans who had served at least 14 days.

These pension applications can be rich sources for genealogy research - especially for providing proof of marriage and details of their military service. The federal government kept all of the applications, regardless of whether it was ultimately approved or denied.

There are almost 100,000 pension applications for War of 1812 veterans. They are kept at the National Archives in Washington, DC. Like pension applications for military service from other wars, photocopies of the War of 1812 files can be ordered from the National Archives (<https://eservices.archives.gov/orderonline>) for an application fee.

However, in 2012, to commemorate the 200th anniversary of the beginning of the War of 1812, the Federation of Genealogical Societies launched a fundraising effort in the genealogical community to digitize these files and place them online for free access by the public. Individuals and genealogical and historical organizations (including the Indiana Genealogical Society) donated - over $3 million to date - and companies such as Ancestry.com and FamilySearch have also their contributed technological expertise.

This collection of pension application files totals more than 7 million pages. The digitizing is now 70% complete, with soldiers' surnames A through M currently available online. The digitized applications can be accessed for free at <https://go.fold3.com/1812pensions>. In the example shown above, Thomas Dickey of Betheny, Harrison County, Missouri claims under the 1871 law that he served in Captain Joel Comb's Company in the Indiana Militia - a claim that was ultimately rejected.

NOTE: If you want to download or print these digitized files, you must create a free account with Fold3.

Not sure if your ancestor served in the War of 1812? FamilySearch has a free index to these War of 1812 pension application files - including those applications that have not yet been digitized.
